

St Columb Minor Academy has recently launched its Internet Rangers Club where some of our Year 6 children are acting as teachers for people from our local community.

The children show their 'pupils' a range of skills on the computer, from how to add clip art to a quiz sheet to looking up how many goals Wayne Rooney has scored so far this season.

A lot of fun has been had looking together at our local area on Google Maps and showing each other books we like on Amazon!

The children love to hear about what St Columb Minor used to be like, and the adults are very impressed by the children's ability to help them on the computer.

Our School Council decided to run an Internet Rangers Club in school, having heard about it from a competition organised by BT. Although we weren't going to enter the competition the School Council thought it would be a good way of sharing some of our skills with our local community. Both children and adults involved in the club look forward to it, and everyone who passes our library while it is on says 'what a fantastic idea!' It's great to be able to do something like this which benefits everyone!
